

Active triage

Our Accident & Emergency (A&E) department is set up to assess and treat children with urgent and emergency conditions; the range of routine tests and investigations is limited in this department.

Why do we do this?

Active triage is a check to see who needs to be seen urgently today for treatment and who would be better seen at another time in one of our regular clinics or by a community optometrist/optician.

This means that if children need emergency care in the AE they will have a shorter wait to receive treatment because the department will not be so full.

Any child needing less urgent care can be seen and treated in a booked clinic with all the tests available or directed to the best place to be assessed.

How does this affect you?

When you come to the children's A&E in Moorfields, your child will be assessed by a triage-trained nurse who will decide which option can provide the best care.

This will be immediate treatment today-only if they have an urgent eye problem. If your child does not require emergency eye care one of the following options will apply:

- You will either be given an appointment date for a clinic before you leave or be sent an appointment in one of our clinics best suited for your child's needs.
- We will recommend that your child has a standard eye test with a community optometrist ("high street optician"). If there are any issues, the optometrist will be able to refer you on to the hospital eye service.
- We will recommend that you see your GP for referral to your local eye clinic.

Your child's records will also be checked by a senior paediatric eye doctor and if any change in plan is required we will be in touch.
